

Meteorologforeningen.no: Norwegian meteorological Society's attempt to ease the access to meteorological information and discussions

S. Agersten, H.O. Hygen

Norwegian meteorological society (solfrid.agersten@met.no)

Norwegian meteorological society is an organisation aiming to increase the society's awareness and knowledge of meteorology and climatology. We also want to ease the access to open discussions regarding the subjects and the people working in this field. As part of this did the Norwegian meteorological society, in the autumn of 2006, launch a website. The objective of this website is to provide an easy access to meteorological and climatological information. So far we try to achieve this by a collection of links to sites with high quality information. A secondary objective is to provide a platform for discussion of scientific and political themes concerning meteorology and climatology. This platform for discussions was made in form of a blog. The first entrance was a report from EMS 2006, more active discussion did an article about how to improve the information to the public trigger.