

Round Table

The focus is on the question of how substantial and binding support can be obtained from outside the greatly appreciated usual group of partners. For this the broader theme of peer review and 'scientific publishing' as a method of communication between colleagues is of great importance. See the recently announced Nature-model. The classic journal model (whether it be digital and open access or not) is reaching its end.