

Impact of extreme weather on public transport

M. Kauffmann

Graduiertenkolleg Naturkatastrophen, Karlsruhe (kauffmann@natkat.org)

Weather is of great influence on the operability of transport networks. Especially public transport is often dependent on single points of failure. Some european cities are surveyed regarding obvious vulnerabilities and mitigation measures. Historic disastrous situations are investigated, questioning if they really could have been prevented.