

Accounting for stream-aquifer interactions in flow forecasting

J. Szilagyi

Budapest University of Technology and Economics

It is demonstrated through the use of the Discrete Linear Cascade Model (DLCM, a flow routing model) applied on the Danube, how accounting for even simplified stream-aquifer interactions can improve the accuracy of low-flow forecasts. DLCM can also be used in an inverse mode for obtaining information of groundwater contribution to the channel.