

Local Helioseismology of Convection

A. C. Birch

CoRA Divison, NWRA

Local helioseismology is a powerful method for studying solar convection. I will give a short introduction to time-distance helioseismology, which is one particular method of local helioseismology. I will show results from a time-distance study of supergranulation-scale convection.