

Geophysical Research Abstracts,
Vol. 10, EGU2008-A-04832, 2008
SRef-ID: 1607-7962/gra/EGU2008-A-04832
EGU General Assembly 2008
© Author(s) 2008

Scale analysis in meteorology

M.V. Kurgansky (1,2)

(1) Department of Geophysics, Faculty of Physical and Mathematical Sciences, University of Concepcion, Casilla 160-C, Concepcion, Chile, (2) A.M. Obukhov Institute of Atmospheric Physics of the Russian Academy of Sciences, Pyzhevsky 3, Moscow, 119017 Russia
(kurgansk@udec.cl / Fax: +56-41-220104)

A brief overview of scale analysis in meteorology, including from a historical perspective, is presented along with concrete examples of its use to arrive at reduced balanced equations (quasi-geostrophic, Sawyer-Eliassen, etc). For these equations, an emphasis on fulfilment of fundamental conservation laws (energy, potential vorticity, etc) is placed.